

therefore it is not necessary that we should ask him.

Mademoiselle. Pardon me, my dear; he knows that we have occasion for bread, and yet Jesus Christ has ordered us to ask it every day, in the prayer which he has taught us. Don't you say, in your prayers every morning and night, Give us this day our daily bread?

Miss Julia. That's very true, Mademoiselle; but I have never considered it attentively.

Lady Charlotte. For my part, I always pray to God for every thing I want. When I begin my lessons, I always beg of him to give me grace to learn them. When papa, mamma, or my sisters, are sick, I pray to him to restore them. When I have a great desire to have any thing, I entreat the Lord to incline mamma to give it me; and God is so very good, he always grants me every reasonable request.

Mademoiselle. Always continue this practice, my dear. Let us, my dear children, dren, look upon God as your father and gracious master, and boldly ask a father for things, and a servant may take things with a master. But as we have of our real wants, and as we have things which are not proper for us always say, Lord, grant us this, if it is for thy glory and our salvation.—Now let us try to learn something of geography. When we met, we spoke of the names given to the different parts of the earth, that is to say, of a continent, an island, a peninsula, an isthmus, and a strait. We must learn the different names given to the different parts of the world.

Do you observe this? It is called the ocean. There are four parts of the world named from the coasts of the earth, near which they are situated. The South Sea, the North Sea, the Atlantic Ocean, and the Western Ocean. The part of the sea which is called the
